Ann Nyberg, anchor:

A big boost for UConn. Today, Fairfield-based General Electric donated eleven million dollars to the school. It's all to help the university become a leader in E-business and engineering. The money will be used to build an E-lab at the Stamford Campus.

Denis Nayden (CEO GE Capital): UConn students and faculty, together with GE Capital associates, will explore, create, and analyze, and very importantly, implement real GE Capital E-business projects.
